ACYA Proposed Programs /Activities

1. Support the holding of a national exhibition of young architects at the national level in each member country.
2. Organizing exhibitions of young architects across national borders as a form of collaboration between institutes.
3. Encourage architecture festivals by young architects in member countries.
4. Holding a series of talks for young architects. This series of talks is encouraged to be a cross-border activity.
5. Using YouTube as a platform for young architects to speak and spreading their ideas to all audiences.
6. Holding open design workshops that are useful for the development of young architects in all member countries.
7. Establish more friendly communication with the entire community of young architects wherever they are.
8. Collaborate with universities in organizing discussions of young architects on campus.

Young Architects Workshop (YAW) is curated to bridge the transition between academia and the industry, exposing architectural students as well as fresh graduates to the many aspects of Architectural practice. Young architects from various firms or public agencies with the relevant experience or expertise are invited as guest speakers to share on the various key stages of an Architecture project, which aim to equip budding architects with insight and knowledge to gain a wider perspective of our industry.

The topic for our second edition is on "Feasibility Study" and the speakers shall take turns to share their invaluable lessons and tips from both Private & Public projects' perspectives.

The hybrid session will also involve a segment where speakers will take part in a Q & A with the attendees.

YAL is proud to support Singapore Institute of Architects (SIA) in this year's edition of Archifest - "The Order of Love" with our second episode of Young Architects Talk (YAT). The talk hopes to uncover ways collaborators synergize to create a more loving and hospitable future characterized by the love of people, community and the environment.

Aligning our Pecha Kucha to the Archifest theme, it is centered around three core concepts where we welcome conversations to deepen our understanding of love in our built environment. The talk is curated in a manner to spark conversations amongst Architects, Researchers, Students and Artists on:

1. Love of Our Planet
2. Love of People
3. Love across Generations
