International seminar on

'Architecture for Sustainable and Resilient Habitat: Think Local'

Organized by Institute of Architects Bangladesh

DHAKA SEPTEMBER 27 2014

BRIEF

It is becoming increasingly obvious that natural calamities induced by climate change are already affecting human settlements on an unprecedented scale in the wake of hurricane Sandy, Aila, Sidr, Katrina, the Indian ocean earthquake and tsunami, tsunami induced Fukushima Daiichi disaster, 2005 Maharashtra floods etc. This has triggered a global effort to increase resilience of human habitat. Reducing, recycling and reusing resources to reduce impact of cities and built environment on the environment is now as crucial as ever.

The issue of sustainability and resilience is extremely pertinent in Asia, which is, at present, home for 4.3 billion people. By 2030 an estimated more than half of the world's urban population will live in Asian cities. By 2025 Asia alone will have at least 10 megacities. Cities with high density in Asia will be among the most vulnerable to disasters.

Our ancestors have adapted lifestyles, livelihood and habitat to changing natural conditions for thousands of years. They were also adept at the stewardship of natural resources in close connection with locale specific environmental, social economic and cultural practices. Tapping into local wisdom may hold the keys to a better future.

Architects must look in to the past, the vernacular and look at the present and look forward to the future pedagogy & technology in responding to the challenge of striking a balance between economy, growth, sustainability and resilience in our cities and habitat, in the context-responsive framework.

HIGHLIGHTS

KEYNOTE SPEECH

Ar. Dr. Ken Yeang. Principal, T R Hamzah and Yeang, Malaysia

"I'm an ecologist first, an architect second." -Ken Yeang, Eco architect
"One of the 50 people who could save the planet." -The Guardian

Widely regarded as one of the key figures of eco-friendly architecture and master planning, Ar. Dr. Ken Yeang's work has won 20 international awards including the Aga Khan Award for Architecture and the RAIA awards. His works have been published widely. Key projects include the high-rise National Library Board building (Singapore), the 40-storey Eco-Tower at Elephant & Castle, the 24-storey IBM Building (Malaysia) and 15-storey Mesiniaga Building (IBM franchise) (Malaysia).

".....Ken Yeang has developed a distinctive architectural vocabulary that extends beyond questions of style to confront issues of sustainability and how we can build in harmony with the natural world....." -Lord Norman Foster

FOCUS SPEECH

Ar. Eric J. Cesal. CEO, Architecture for Humanity, USA

Eric J. Cesal graduated in Architecture, Construction Management and Business Administration from Washington University in St. Louis in the worst depression to hit the US since the 1930's. He published "Down Detour Road: An Architect in Search of Practice" from the MIT Press in 2010. This widely acclaimed book deals on the state of the architecture profession and future areas where architects might expand the footprint of their services.

In the same year, he joined Architecture for Humanity (AFH), the voluntary organization formed by Cameron Sinclair in 1999 and began work in earthquake devastated Haiti. One of his key areas of focus is the improvement of resilience in vulnerable settlements. AFH has published "Design Like You Give a Damn [1] +[2]", extensive compendiums of projects and practices aimed to enhance resilience, emergency shelters and improve life of the people who are less fortunate than those who can hire an architect.

.....and several presentations on sustainable design by ARCASIA Member Institutes.

MANUAL/PROTOCOL of ACGSA Roundtable

There was an open discussion regarding having a MANUAL/PROTOCOL of ARCASIA Roundtable on Sustainability in Architecture & Construction.

IAB offered its service towards preparing the draft of the manual/protocol for necessary discussion in the next ROUNDTABLE.

7th. ACGSA Roundtable

The 7th. Roundtable will be held in Mongolia as the Mongolian Institute of Architects expressed its desire to hold the next ROUNDTABLE.

The meeting welcomed the intention and accepted the offer and decided to request Mongolian Institute to hold the 7th. ROUNDTABLE between Mid August and Early September 2015 so that the event does not coincide with Muslim religious festivals (Eid Ul Fitr. & Eid Ul Adha) and Hindu religious festival of Durga Puja.

It is expected that the weather in Ulan Bator will be pleasant during Aug-Sept.
