[FB house 2]: Hong Thoi, Phu Xuyen, Hanoi, Vietnam

Roofing agglomeration of various residential groupings is expected to take shape when a large number of FB Houses are connected with each other by floating playing grounds, vegetable-growing rafts, fish-raising areas, etc. Vietnam is one of the hardest-hit countries in the world by climate change. As forecast, 41 percent of the Mekong Delta area and 13 percent of the Red River Delta area will be submerged by the sea level rise of 1 meter, directly affecting from 20 to 30 million people. In this context, FB House is believed to provide a useful alternative for millions of poor households to, as soon as possible, create a stable and safe accommodation themselves, and adapt to the worst scenario of responding to climate change.

PINK HOUSE

HONORARY MENTION

Award Winner:
Z305 studio

Project Location:
Long Xuyen, An Giang Province, Viet Nam

The space is separated into different layers with a homogeneous wash stone (granite) material inside and outside, blurring the boundaries, only the subject and the atmosphere surrounding the subject form solid. Calculation of the space is determined by the purpose of use and each activity that takes place. Architecture has a special material relationship with human life, as a cover and foundation for the life that unfolds around it. A large opening with space connecting the sky and the building, has a metaphorical and evocative connotation of the small image of man before vast nature. Functional spaces are compressed in a solid mass.
